Marshall M. Fredericks Sculpture Museum, located on the campus of Saginaw Valley State University, announces the opening of two special exhibitions. “Front Row Center: Icons of Rock, Blues, and Soul” and “Color Play: The Art of Nanci LaBret Einstein” both open Friday, May 17, and will run through Saturday, Aug. 31.

“Front Row Center: Icons of Rock, Blues, and Soul” takes audiences on a musical odyssey through the golden eras of rock, blues and soul. The iconic photographs of Larry Hulst capture the freewheeling energy of live music and the enduring visual spectacle of rock’s greatest performers. From Janis Joplin and Jimi Hendrix to David Bowie and Lauryn Hill, “Front Row Center: Icons of Rock, Blues and Soul” brings together around 70 images of legendary musicians and singers across three genres and generations.

The exhibition charts Hulst’s extraordinary path through the pulsing heart of the most exciting live music of the last century, showcasing a unique visual anthology of rock, blues, and soul music from 1970–1999. These images, which have been featured on album art and in “Rolling Stone” magazine spreads, convey Hulst’s lifelong passion for the magnetism, immediacy, and unpredictability of live music.

Simultaneously, the museum will present "Color Play: The Art of Nanci LaBret Einstein," a vibrant exploration of color, form, and creativity. Experience the art of Nanci LaBret Einstein in this immersive exhibition that highlights the many milieus and talents of the artist. In her intricately detailed freestanding and wall sculptures, Einstein works with recycled objects like beads, popsicle sticks and other found objects. The exhibition also includes Einstein's gestural drawings and layered photo collages that evoke emotion while exploring form, weight, color, light and texture.

"We're thrilled to present these two extraordinary exhibitions side by side," said Ashley Ross, Associate Director of Collections and Impact. "Visitors will be transported by the musical genius of the rock, blues, and soul icons, and then inspired by the vibrant color and energy of Nanci LaBret Einstein's art. It's a combination that promises to be both enlightening and exhilarating."
